Bamboo

(SASA VEITCHII)

Bamboo are a group of perennial evergreen (except for certain temperate species) plants in the true grass family Poaceae. Giant bamboo are the largest members of the grass family.

Bamboo are also the fastest growing woody plants in the world. They are capable of growing up to 60 cm (24 in.) or more per day due to a unique rhizome-dependent system. However, this astounding growth rate is highly dependent on local soil and climatic conditions. Bamboo are of notable economic and cultural significance in East Asia and South East Asia where they are used extensively in everyday life as building materials, as a food source and as a highly versatile raw product.

USES OF BAMBOO: Culinary, medicine, construction, textiles, musical instruments, water processing.

Construction Update

The Inn at the Market is progressing beautifully, it is going to be absolutely stunning! Our new space is now under construction as well and we are so excited to celebrate it's opening with all of you. As is often the case with construction, both projects have experienced some delays, but this level of beauty takes time. We are hoping to be open the first week of December at the latest. We will keep you posted with the exciting news!
